The Cove's history

Set along the quiet shore of Togcha Beach, Jeff's Pirates Cove sits on land rich in CHamoru heritage and World War II history. Its sands have yielded Latte Period artifacts dating back some 1,000 years, including ancient pottery, sling stones, and traces of a fishing village. A WWII bunker still stands against the Cove's sweeping ocean view, an enduring reminder of a poignant past.

Visit Jeff's Seaside Museum to learn more.

1940s-50s

Rich in WWII history

After the war, these shores became home to Camp Ethridge, a Navy rehabilitation camp for aircraft carrier crews and pilots. In November 1949, Typhoon Allyn destroyed most of the camp. The buildings that survived went on to house The Seaside Restaurant, then The Steak House, and finally Pirates Cove, after Jimmy and Margie Cruz acquired the property in 1953.

Jeff's Pirates Cove established

Jeff Pleadwell purchases Pirates Cove from Margie Cruz and sets about transforming the humble roadside tavern into one of the Western Pacific's best-loved open-air family restaurants and bars.

1980s-Present

Building a Legacy

Through decades of dedication, Jeff created a recreational sanctuary for locals, military residents, and travelers alike. With Togcha Bay as a one-of-a-kind backdrop, Jeff's Pirates Cove has hosted packed concerts featuring Jimmy Cliff, Maxi Priest, Mike Love of the Beach Boys, and many more.

Though now known around the world, the Cove has always been an independent, family-run business built on warm island hospitality. Jeff's children grew up working in the kitchen, restaurant, and gift shop. And today, his grandchildren's names mark favorite spots around the property, from Charlie's Soft Serve Ice Cream Shop to Emma's Beach.
